Upland approves condominium site

The Upland City Council Monday night overruled a planning commission denial of a 44-lot condominium development at the northwest corner of Benson Avenue and 15th Street, a corner with a long history of council-commission differences.

Council members approved the tentative tract on 11.14 acres sought by The Mayer Group of Downey for minimum lots of 7,500 square feet.

Ina Petokas and Frank Hoover voted for the tentative tract. Councilman Bill Bottin was absent.

Mayor George Gibson and Mayor Pro Tem John McCarthy abstained from voting on advice from City Attorney Donald Maroney. Both Gibson and McCarthy serve on the board of directors of the West End Land Co., which is selling the acreage to The Mayer Group.

The city is a shareholder in the land company.

In December, the council concluded more than two years of sometimes sharp debate with the planning commission on the future use of the land.

The council approved a zone change for residential use of the property. Planning commissioners had twice voted against the zone change, saying residential use was incompatible with the site's surroundings and suggesting light industry would be more suitable.

Planning Director Bill Young explained Monday that the planning commission's denial of the tentative tract in April stemmed over concern of lots next to the Upland Racquet Club.

"The concern was that even with landscaping, it would take several years before landscaping would mature to the point that lights and glare from the tennis club would not be visible," Young said.

He added that commissioners noted that even with rear yards some 40 feet in depth the homes would be adjacent to a source of noise.

An alternative would be to move a planned street to the eastern boundary of the property, adjacent to the tennis club, gaining the separation of the 64-foot street, he said.

Young said the developer would lose a maximum of two or three lots with the change.

Dave Enemark, project manager for The Mayer Group, disagreed, saying the developer would lose a minimum of five lots.

Enemark recounted the firm's efforts to get the zone change approved and outlined steps to be taken so homes could be built next to the tennis club.

"The tennis courts' lights and noise are mitigated by the planting of fast-growing trees, block walls and the attenuation of noise by above-standards sound insulation," he said.

He added that no two-story homes would be built next to the tennis club.

"We agree to all conditions required for approval of this tentative map, and we feel we have vigorously pursued all aspects required to induce a compatible and pleasant neighborhood environment."

Councilwoman Petokas questioned whether moving the cul-de-sac eastward would cut down on the impact of the neighboring tennis club.

"It's a value judgment," she said.

Hoover agreed, noting the lights would be shining at the front of homes rather than the rear under the alternative street arrangement.

Although two council members abstained, the quorum present permitted the vote on the tentative tract.

In other action, the council approved temporary installation of four-way stop signs at the intersections of 17th, 18th and 19th streets with Mountain Avenue.

City Engineer Fred Blanchard noted the interim measure was necessary because traffic signals for 17th and 18th streets will not be installed for nine months to a year. The traffic signals are a joint city and state project.

Peter Liu, Upland's traffic engineer, said the three intersections meet vehicle and pedestrian volume guidelines for the stop signs and said new homes coming into the area are expected to generate 960 more trips on Mountain Avenue each day.

Upland High spring concert

The Upland High School instrumental music department will be holding its annual Spring Concert on May 31, in the Upland High School Auditorium.

The performing groups, directed by Gregg Sisk, will include the Wind Sensemble, a group that has received excellent and superior ratings in festivals throughout the year; the Symphonic Band, which has received very good ratings; and the competitive Jazz Ensemble that has placed in the advanced division in every festival attended this year.

George Weidmann examines one of the several swords he has collected during his travels. The 73-year-old Upland resident coupled a love for fencing with a wanderlust that kept him traveling for 45 years. He enjoys the title of "father of fencing in the West End" and helped found the West End Fencing Club. Weidmann, who taught fencing for the Upland Recreation Department, recently agreed to help train scoring officials for fencing in the 1984 Olympics. His grandfather founded the Royal Academy of Fencing in 1875 in Switzerland and Weidmann continues the tradition. (Staff photo by Don Green)

Upland fencer recounts life full of adventure

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

Like some modern version of a wandering knight, George Weidmann — a sword never far from his side — left his home in Switzerland at 18 to see the world and search for adventure.

And he found it.

Weidmann has owned plantations in the South Pacific and a horse ranch in Colombia, come close to being bitten by a poisonous snake, hunted in Africa and South America, sailed through a typhoon near Tahiti and rubbed shoulders with movie stars in Hollywood.

He coupled traveling with a lifelong love of fencing, and Weidmann enjoys being known as the "father of fencing in the West End."

No adventure is complete without a bit of romance, and at 73, the Upland resident discretely admits he met beautiful women along the way.

In his photo album, the younger Weidmann cuts quite a dashing figure with his moustache and hunter's garb.

"Well, I started traveling when I was 18 years old. I took the first trip to Paris, France, and from then on, I kept on traveling for about 45 years," Weidmann said.

Staked by an inheritance from his father, an importer and inventor in Zurich, Weidmann fed his wanderlust.

"I couldn't stay at home — I could never stay in one place."

The dates and places run together, but after extensive travel in Europe came the West Indies, Africa, the South Seas Islands, Central and South America and the United States.

"When I lived in Tahiti, it was a paradise — I mean a real paradise. I said many times to myself, 'This is truly God's country.'"

Weidmann, who speaks six languages, owned a coconut plantation in Tahiti, a vanilla plantation on nearby Moorea and a banana plantation in Panama.

"I stopped in Panama and right at that time the war (World War II) started breaking out in Europe. I couldn't go back to Europe, I couldn't go back to Tahiti — so I bought a banana plantation in Panama."

None of the plantations were a great financial success, he said.

But they contributed to an interesting life.

He recalls preparing for a hunt in Panama and instead found himself the prey. A poisonous snake, "coming slowly down," hung from the ceiling of a shack where he spent the night, Weidmann said.

His guide tossed an Indian blanket over his face, stood on a chair and cut the snake in half with a machete.

"The one (part) with the head fell on my chest and I could feel a slight scratching ... and that saved my life — that Indian blanket."

The stories flowed as Weidmann thumbed through his photo album.

"That's an Indian chief in Bonga Bonga, and he wanted me to marry his daughter here. And all that money she's got around her neck, he wanted me to give him horses, cows, anything I had on the farm (in exchange).

"I said, 'Look, I'm married, I can't marry your daughter.'

"And he said, 'What's the difference. You've got another for reserve in case the other one gives up.'

"Oh, I tell you, I had a hard time getting away from him."

He did consider matrimony with a Tahitian girl named Schuu Schu, whom he was told was a relative of a past island queen, and fondly recalls that Tahiti lived up to its reputation as an isle of romance in the 1930s.

On a trip from Tahiti to nearby Raiatea, Weidmann encountered a typhoon.

"It got so bad that the captain said 'lay down' and they tied us down with rope so we wouldn't fall over the boat.

"When the ship turned this way," Weidmann said, motioning with his hands, "our feet were up to the knees in the ocean and right in front of us were nothing but four sharks — that was another close one."

In Egypt during the late 1920s, Weidmann attended a feast where protocol dictated that a guest show appreciation by burping, a talent he never perfected.

Fortunately, a friend had, and Weidmann simply opened his mouth while his buddy provided the sound. He said he was the hit of the evening when his friend let out a sound similar to a 21-gun salute.

Weidmann and his late wife, Gladys, settled in Cucamonga some 30 years ago, and they traveled widely in the United States, which he praised lavishly. Interested in archaeology and cultures, he studied Indian life in Florida and the Southwest.

He still fences and his Upland apartment is filled with swords, both collector's items and competition pieces.

The money is about gone, but asked if he looks back with any regrets, Weidmann replied, "Never."

Joan Crawford's letters shared

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

Nothing will shake Dorothy Clayton's belief that Joan Crawford, the late actress maligned by her adopted daughter's recent book, was anything but a beautiful, gracious and thoughtful woman.

The Upland woman started a correspondence with Joan Crawford in 1951. Their exchange of letters lasted until April 6, 1977, just before Miss Crawford's death.

Mrs. Clayton's 82 letters from Joan Crawford are now on display at the Upland Public Library. The letters, flawlessly typed, no doubt by a secretary, are short, warm and quite informative, and have been signed by the actress, it is presumed.

On some of the letters, there are short notes written in Miss Crawford's sprawling handwriting. She often refers to "the children," but seldom by name, Cindy, Cathy and Christopher, a boy who was "always running away," Mrs. Clayton said, said.

Only in one letter is Christina Crawford's name mentioned. This is the daughter who has written the book, "Mommie Dearest," which paints the famous actress as an abusive parent in no uncertain terms.

In her letter, dated May 30, 1972, the actress wrote, "Christina lives in Los Angeles and has done acting in television and also does commercials."

"Christina is the one that wrote a nasty book about her mother," Mrs. Clayton said. One of the reasons Mrs. Clayton is allowing her letters to be displayed is to defend the actress.

Mrs. Clayton came to California from Ohio in 1927 as a young widow. She worked at various secretarial jobs and about 1929, she's not sure of the date, Mrs. Clayton was taking dialogue for the new "talkies" on a stenotype machine.

"Joan Crawford was around and on the sets," Mrs. Clayton said, "and she was unhappy about not getting the scripts she wanted." Mrs. Clayton said they never were friendly — just passing acquaintances.

Mrs. Clayton left MGM and worked in her secretarial jobs in Los Angeles and one that lasted 10 years with the Santa Fe Railroad in Needles. She also took up photography and two of her pictures, "Desert Road" and "Joshua Tree" were hung in the Kodak building of the 1939 New York World's Fair.

In 1943, Mrs. Clayton signed up with the Army and after training in Des Moines, Iowa, she was based in St. Louis, Mo., doing her usual secretarial work. Without warning, she became ill and after five months in the hospital, was released from the service. "But I couldn't work for two years," she said.

Once mobile again, she signed up for overseas duty with the Civilian Department of the Army. She was in Austria for a year, then spent over 13 years in Liverno, Italy.

"I liked it there — I was taking pictures and winning awards," she said.

It was in 1951 when Mrs. Clayton started writing Joan Crawford from Italy. She wrote when the actress had won an Oscar for her movie, "Mildred Pierce," to congratulate her on "finally getting the right script."

"Within a week, I had an answer," Mrs. Clayton said. From then on, the letters between the two women were exchanged about six times a year.

But Mrs. Clayton never laid eyes on Joan Crawford again in person — she only saw her on the screen. Miss Crawford did send Mrs. Clayton a large portrait of herself which was signed, "To Dorothy with blessings and much gratitude from Joan."

Dorothy Clayton is proud of her collection of letters from the famous actress, now made infamous by her daughter's book.

The letters reveal Joan Crawford as a devoted wife, mother — and above all, a woman.

Central district plans big budget cuts

The Central School board last week directed Superintendent Norman Guith to oversee cuts of nearly $300,000 before the district's preliminary budget returns to trustees next month.

Guith noted the district is using a new budget format this year, seeking ideas and requests from the district's 250 employees on the spending plan for 1979-80.

Proposed expenditures before trustees Tuesday represented something of a "dream" list from "every employee who wanted to turn one in," he added.

The requests helped push expenditures to $4,057,008, or $297,968 above the district's latest forecast of income of $3,759,040 for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Guith indicated the first-glance deficit is predictable under the new budget procedure, which he said is aimed increasing employee involvement.

And employees will have first crack at suggesting cuts before the district's four principals, Guith and finally the board reach a tentative budget for possible adoption June 12 or 26.

Guith and Estela Perez, director of business services, reported that by July 1980, 396 new homes are expected to be occupied in the district, increasing enrollment by 198 students.

Current district enrollment is 2,422 compared to 2,260 in September.

Guith added that he expects some children to return from private schools when the district goes off double sessions this fall.

"We don't have a way of predicting that," the superintendent said, referring to how many students might come back from private schools.

Enrollment growth was discussed by the board in deciding what average daily attendance (ADA) figure should be plugged into the budget for calculating state funds based on ADA.

The board settled on a figure of 2,463.

Financing bills are still pending in Sacramento, but Guith said the state will apparently allow a 7 percent inflationary growth in ADA funds rather than the 6 percent the district previously anticipated.

Guith asked the board to consider whether several projects should be included in the budget. One was metal a metal storage, shop and maintenance building that Guith said would help the district save money through bulk purchases.

Cost was estimated at roughly $45,000.

A remodeling project, adding space for the kitchen at Central School, was also discussed. Trustee Thomas Shoar said the district should look at an alternative of placing a kitchen at the new elementary school.

Guith said that possibility is being considered.

The superintendent cautioned that the board might face a decision in the next school year of returning to double sessions now in effect or losing some ADA funds.

Continued district growth could push class sizes over the 30-student limit in grades one through eight for ADA money, but Guith said he does not expect a return to double sessions in the coming year.

Trustee Bruce Van Orden said a letter from Roy C. Hill, county superintendent of schools, declared his resignation notice "legally ineffective" because the deferred date exceeded a 30-day limit.

Van Orden — who will assume an Jesus Christ Latter-day Saints in Salt Lake City — said he will submit a new resignation notice, probably keeping the same effective date of June 13.

Sewer connection fees for business supported

By PETER WONG
Staff Writer

Sewer connection fees for new businesses and industries were recommended Thursday night by a committee of West End mayors and other elected officials.

The fees would raise money for the expansion of sewage treatment capacity at plants operated by the Chino Basin Municipal Water District.

The committee recommended the fees without much discussion. It will submit the proposal to the seven local governments which contract with the district for sewage treatment.

The fees must be approved by city councils in Ontario, Upland, Chino, Montclair and Fontana, the county board of supervisors and the board of directors of the Cucamonga County Water District, which serves Rancho Cucamonga.

The fees would be charged when a building permit is issued for a new business or industrial plant. The amount to be charged will depend upon the size and nature of the business or industrial plant.

The proposed formula includes a minimum charge of $150, $30 for each fixture unit as defined by the Uniform Plumbing Code, and 50 cents per gallon for any amount greater than 3,000 gallons of wastewater discharged daily.

Frank Lesinsky, president of the Cucamonga County Water District board, offered the proposal. Lesinsky, who headed the group which drafted the proposal, said, "It comes to a fine compromise."

Theo Nowak, acting general manager of the Chino Basin Municipal Water District, said the district staff had not reviewed the proposed fees. But he did not offer any objection to them.

Together with a similar fee proposed for new houses connected to municipal sewer systems, the industrial sewer connection fees are expected to raise millions of dollars for the expansion of regional sewage treatment capacity.

The shortage of such capacity at regional plants in Ontario and Chino has been the key factor in limiting home construction and population growth in the West End for two years.

Some industries discharge their sewage into a line reserved for non-reclaimable wastewater. They pay separate connection fees directly to the district.

Of the seven local governments it was submitted to, only the Fontana City Council has not yet acted upon the one-time-only fee of $950 proposed last month for a new house connected to a municipal sewer system.

City councils in Chino and Montclair have given preliminary approval to ordinances that would establish the fee. The other local governments have adopted the fee.

The committee spent more time Thursday night debating whether to proceed with a joint powers agreement.

That would provide the seven local governments with the legal means to control the money they will raise through connection charges. However, the money would go to the Chino Basin district for expansion projects.

On a 4-2 vote, the committee decided to proceed with the agreement and to ask the seven local governments to put up $1,000 each to pay for its drafting.

The dissenters were Ontario Mayor Robert Ellingwood and Carl B. Masingale, president of the Chino Basin board.

"Neither consulting fees nor legal fees will create sewer capacity," Ellingwood said.

Masingale has consistently stressed the independence of the five-member district board in making decisions about how it will spend money for expansion projects.

Masingale indicated he believes a joint powers agreement would undermine the district and was simply a political move on the part of some officials. He asked:

"Are we really sincere in wanting to build more sewage treatment capacity for our residential, commercial and industrial needs, or are we going to spend another year and a half seeing who is going to do what to whom?"

"We (member governments) are the ones who are going to finance this," Lloyd Michael, general manager of the Cucamonga County Water District, replied.

By voting approval of sewer connection charges, Upland Mayor George M. Gibson added, "most of the cities have shown their good faith."

The district's chief source of money for construction — property taxes — was cut sharply after passage of Proposition 13 last year.

Local man helps cancer society

A friend's death kindles action

By KAREN ALTMAN
Staff Writer

When the best man at his wedding died of cancer at age 27, it kindled David Hjorth's interest in the American Cancer Society.

"I've always believed that business people should give some time to meaningful activities in the community they live in," said Hjorth, an Upland insurance agent, "but Jon's death got me thinking about cancer."

Hjorth, associated with the New York Life Insurance Co., heads a volunteer force of businessmen who place cancer society memorial envelopes in local shops and businesses.

The best man, Jon Dingeldein of Santa Barbara, had been Hjorth's close friend since the 10th grade. The pair was playing tennis one day when Dingeldein complained of a lump under his armpit.

"He'd had the problem once before, but the lump was benign," said Hjorth. "This time it was malignant. Major surgery removed quite a bit of his right side, but within 13 months, he was dead."

Newly graduated from medical school, Dingeldein died of melanoma, a cancer that spreads throughout the blood system.

A year after his friend's death in 1976, Hjorth signed up as a volunteer with the West End branch of the cancer society.

His first task was to send a letter to 400 business persons soliciting funds for the society. Nearly $1,400 was raised in that effort.

Now memorial chairman for the society, Hjorth, who lives in Upland with his wife and 10-month-old son, estimates he spends several hours a week in volunteer duty.

Originally a means for persons to convey sympathy to families of cancer victims, the memorial program has been expanded to commemorate many different types of events.

The family of the person in whose honor a gift has been made receives an announcement. The gift is tax-deductible for the donor.

Hjorth's crew of eight insurance agents, recruited at a meeting of the Pomona Valley Life Underwriters Association, pass out donor envelopes to businesses.

The program is year-round but is emphasized around Memorial Day, Hjorth said.

According to Bessie Clark, field representative in the society's West End office, $465 has been raised through the efforts of Hjorth and his helpers.

"One of the things that attracted me to the cancer society is the fact that a very small part of the contributions goes toward salaries," Hjorth said.

According to Mrs. Clark, of every dollar donated to the society, 31.3 cents goes to research, 26.7 cents goes to education, 21.7 cents goes to service, 11.5 percent goes to fund-raising and 8.8 cents goes to management and general costs.

More volunteers are needed for the memorial program as well as other cancer society programs. To help, call Hjorth at 981-4951 or Bessie Clark at 983-2784.

West End man wants to form citizen drive in gas crunch

A West End man who is upset over the tight gas situation and stories of oil companies cutting supplies to retailers is trying to form a citizen action group.

Louis Esquibel of Upland said he has been angered by things he has seen and heard and he thinks it's time to form a group to handle and investigate complaints in the county.

The two goals of the group, Esquibel said, are to make motorists aware of suspected "fraudulent practices" and get citizens involved in reporting suspicious or questionable actions of gasoline dealers and oil companies.

"We're not going to solve the gas crisis..." Esquibel said, "but we're tired of being manipulated and it's time that exposure be given where needed."

The man feels there is a real need for such a group, which he calls United Gas Alert System (UGAS).

Anyone interested in more information about UGAS can call 985-0514.

Lifestyle changes could reverse national statistics

By LINDA BERGSTEDT
Panorama Editor

Statistics for the leading cause of death in this country today could be reversed if people would change their lifestyles, alter eating habits and stop smoking.

The top cause of fatality is arteriosclerosis. Hardening of the arteries affects more people and causes more deaths than any other single disease, Dr. Gilbert Turner said recently.

The vascular surgeon was the guest speaker for the April luncheon meeting of the San Antonio Community Hospital Auxiliary in Aita Auditorium at the hospital.

Speaking on "Arteriosclerosis and Related Complications," Dr. Turner constantly referred to arteriosclerosis obliterans as ASO, a term the audience could easily identify with hardening of the arteries.

"Fifty-four percent of deaths in this country are related to ASO. We need to do something to prevent this," Dr. Turner said. He cited many contributing factors to the disease such as high blood pressure, the wrong diet, overweight, stress, lack of exercise and smoking.

"The case against smoking has been established," the physician said. "People who smoke have a higher death rate than those who don't. You have a 103 percent greater chance of dying if you smoke.

"If you smoke heavily, you are committing suicide by giving up 15 to 16 years of your life," he said.

Furthering the case against smoking, Dr. Turner said nicotine raises the cholesterol level in smokers, and that women who smoke 35 cigarettes a day have a higher risk of heart attack than those who smoke less or not at all.

But diet probably is the most important factor in preventing ASO or reversing it in the human body, the physician said. Fats and cholesterols are the culprits here.

"No population on a low-fat diet has an incidence of ASO and ASO can be reversed by diet," he emphasized.

"You must diminish the amount of fat and cholesterol in your diet," he said. These fats now include unsaturated ones due to recent studies.

"Unsaturated fats were supposed to be the great panacea, and they do make cholesterol level in the blood drop. But, there is no reduction of ASO and there is a buildup of cholesterol plaque on the artery wall," he said.

Dr. Turner recommended a low-fat diet of 15 percent or less fat in the total diet.

When asked if a person should go back to butter instead of margarine, he said, "It would be better to go off it all together. Fifteen percent low-fat won't leave much room for butters or oils."

He said an occasional egg was okay, and that low-fat milk was all right, but non-fat milk was better to drink decaffeinated was better.

"Learn to control hypertension, control stress, control obesity and quit smoking," he said.

"If you quit smoking, arteries will revert back toward normal," he said, adding that those who switch to cigars instead of cigarettes are "only kidding themselves. Cigars have more nicotine than cigarettes.

"But diet still is the single most important thing you can do," he said.

"Change your diet. Then stop smoking and get more exercise."

The physician also cited the benefits of exercise in preventing hardening of the arteries, saying the incidence of ASO is five times higher in people who don't exercise.

"Get more exercise, three or four times a week after you have been checked and cleared by your personal physician," he recommended.

The vascular surgeon also suggested eliminating coffee because it too increases the fats in the blood. He said

ASO leads to strokes, aneurysms

When arteriosclerosis obliterans (ASO) is allowed to go unchecked, the disease manifests itself in many ways — such as stroke, aneurysms and heart blockage.

ASO and its complications were the topic of Dr. Gilbert Turner when he spoke recently at the San Antonio Community Hosptial Auxiliary's meeting at the hospital.

Hardening of the arteries seems to localize in several major arteries such as the abdominal, femoral (groin), carotid (brain) and coronary (heart).

"ASO is a general disease, but fortunately it seems to be localized so we can control its effects through surgery," Dr. Turner noted.

He described vascular surgery as "one of the most progressive and dynamic areas of modern medicine.

"We're saving limbs today," he exclaimed. "But we're only attacking the disease locally."

Accompanying his talk with slides, the vascular surgeon showed drawings comparing a normal artery with one containing cholesterol deposits. "That's all that eggs and cheese," he said.

ASO occurs in men from the ages of 50 to 70 at a rate of 6 males to 1 female. But after the age of 60, women start to catch up, with the ratio changing to 2 ½ men to 1 woman. The physician said this could be due to lack of estrogen or the presence of diabetes in women over 60. He said 20 percent of the ASO in leg arteries occurs in patients with diabetes, and that estrogen seems to have a potent influence on the presence of ASO.

Dr. Turner said strokes, caused by ASO in the carotid arteries, are the third leading cause of death and the leading cause of chronic disability.

"Seventy-five percent of these patients will have such symptoms as light-headedness, dizziness, weakness or numbness in extremities and paralysis."

He said 40 to 50 percent of stokes could be prevented if patients recognized these symptoms. Between one-third and one-half of the patients with symptoms will progress to a stroke within five years if untreated.

The vascular surgeon said aneurysms, ballooning out of arteries, are caused by hardening of the arteries 99 percent of the time. They occur mostly in the elderly and generally are located in the abdomen. The second most frequent location of an aneurysm is behind the knee.

The danger with an aneurysm is rupture, which can be fatal if the aneurysm is located in the peritoneum cavity.

Dr. Turner also discussed pacemakers, showing some samples and talking about how they work.

Mother's milk best for baby

Pediatricians, abandoning four decades of "bottle - feed your baby" advice, are pointing to new evidence linking mother's milk to protective antibodies that babies can't produce.

According to a recent report in Medical World News, a leading medical magazine, mother's milk increases immunity to infant disease, decreases respiratory and gastrointestinal infections and offers a higher resistance to allergies.

Both the physical and emotional health of children are affected by the feeding method, says Dr. John Kennell, director of child development at Rainbow Babies and Children's Hospital in Cleveland.

"Where mothers and newborn infants are permitted close contact," says Dr. Kennell, "an attachment forms between them that has lasting effects on maternal behavior and lasting consequences for the child's development and well - being."

Dr. Lewis Barness, chairman of the American Academy of Pediatrics Committee on Nutrition says these findings have elevated the importance of human milk in child development and renewed medical interest in nutrition.

"Infant nutrition is more than a simple matter of nutrients provided by a formula," Barness says. "How babies are fed is as important as what they are fed."

The report also links breast - feeding to reduced adult obesity and heart disease.

Lactating women require 500 calories more per day than normally needed, according to Ann Coulston, R.D., incoming president of the California Dietetic Association.

Coulston says nursing mothers should get the extra nutrients they need by eating a balanced diet. "Calcium is particularly important," she says. "The fetus will rob its mother's bones of calcium if enough calcium isn't supplied through her diet."

Coulston suggests daily selections from the four food groups system of nutrition including four servings from the vegetables and fruits, and breads and cereals groups.

Drivers in state warned, 'Steering is not enough!'

By ROBERT P. STUDER
Copley News Service

SACRAMENTO — From now until the normally deadly Memorial Day weekend which climaxes on the 28th of May, Californians will be inundated with a single, hard - hitting message intended to save their lives.

"Steering is not enough!"

From freeway road - condition signs such as straddle Highway 50 en route from the state Capitol to Lake Tahoe or the Santa Monica Freeway in Southern California, flashing in the sky from the Goodyear blimp, spreading the message through thousands of bumper stickers, and from posters laboriously painted by schoolchildren, the words will come.

In urban shopping centers and from taxicabs in Eureka in the far north of the state, the message will burn into the consciousness of motorists throughout the state.

It will be the first coordinated effort by at least eight different state departments to do something about the Memorial Day death toll on California's highways, which last year claimed 83 lives.

Coordinated by the state Department of Motor Vehicles, the "Steering Is Not Enough" campaign will also be actively supported by the California Highway Patrol, the Department of Transportation, the Office of Traffic Safety, the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control, the state Department of Education and the state Department of Alcohol and Drug Abuse, as well as countless service clubs, school districts and other organizations at the local level.

Spearheading the effort will be the district managers of the 47 local offices of the Department of Motor Vehicles, who have been working for weeks to involve local citizens in the effort.

Among one of the most energetic of the local programs is one being pushed by the Escondido DMV office, where 60,000 pledge cards are being circulated seeking to get it down in writing from motorists all over the north San Diego County area that they will use extra caution on the highways over the Memorial Day weekend.

The idea was born a year ago for the statewide campaign when Doris Alexis, director of the DMV, visited a local traffic safety campaign in Fresno which utilized such promotional tactics to encourage traffic safety.

Alexis was impressed.

She broached the idea to her 147 district managers and the state Traffic Safety Office came up with $25,650 in federal grant money to underwrite the promotional effort.

Erwin Cooper, of the DMV headquarters staff here, was appointed "Traffic Awareness Week" coordinator.

Thus, already under way — and growing toward a climax at the eve of the Memorial weekend May 26 — the message will be repeated statewide: "Steering Is Not Enough" to get your car and your passengers to their destination and safely home again.

"You have to drive sober, and at safe speeds. You must pass other cars with care and keep your distance so you don't tailgate."

"You can live longer by giving way sometimes and letting the other fellow go first, by looking ahead for traffic signs and signals, and by giving your car a safety check before you leave."

And most of all, the message points out, "Drive with a smile. Anger and impatience can be killers on the highway."

As Glen Craig, commissioner of the California Highway Patrol, put it: "Drivers too often think of traffic laws as prohibitions. Actually, laws are safeguards. Obey the law and you greatly improve your chances of avoiding an accident."

Thus, on Memorial Day 1979 an idea that had its birth in the City of Fresno will grow to blanket the entire state.

"If it works," Cooper said, "it could become an annual event."

Apartments shouldn't be overfurnished

By Leslie Ayers
Copley News Service

One of the most common decorating errors made by people living in apartments is the tendency to overfurnish, especially if they are moving from a large home into smaller living quarters.

Don't be afraid to challenge old ideas by coming up with new ways to design and furnish an apartment. It's not necessary to fill a room with furniture and accessories, nor do they have to be arranged in a traditional style.

Apartments, like homes, should reflect the interests of the people who live there. And the furniture should be arranged to accommodate the lifestyle of the residents.

One couple living in a medium - sized apartment were musicians who delighted in giving dinner parties for 12 to 16 guests followed by a mini - concert.

Between the hosts and their group of friends, the instruments included piano, harp and xylophone.

The problem was how to create out of the living room an area for the large musical instruments, the musicians and seating for their audience.

The dinner parties were held in a separate dining room which was furnished with a large rectangular table which seated 16. All of the living room furniture was removed and stored in the basement.

In the bare room, an environment was created out of multi - level platform areas. The platforms as well as the floor were covered entirely with commercial carpet.

In the center of the room was space for the piano and all of the musicians. The guests sat and lounged on the platforms. Many large fluffy pillows were scattered around the room to provide comfort and add color. The rest of the decor was highlighted by the use of many tall plants.

Even when the room was not being used for concerts and entertaining, it had a warm dramatic look, and most importantly, it filled their living needs.

The expense for such a treatment was minimal. The platforms were constructed with 2x4s and plywood supplies purchased from a local lumber yard.

This class will offer the inactive nurse the opportunity to attend lectures and to review all the vital systems. With instructor supervision, nurses can gain expertise in the areas of team leading, medications, O.V. therapy, and work experience in all clinical areas such as obstetrics, pediatrics, intensive care units and many others.

Thirty continuing education contact hours are awarded for this class which is scheduled for Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8 a.m. to noon, June 26 through August 2. Eighty hours of clinical experience will be scheduled at Corona Community or Montclair Doctor's Hospital.

Registration is limited to 30 students and the deadline for registration is June 15. For additional information, contact Sandra Gray at 987-1737, 822-4484 or 735-0242 ext. 481 or 488

State's nerve center not very commanding

By OTTO KREISHER
Copley News Service

SACRAMENTO — Dr. Strangelove would be disappointed in California's emergency command center.

The facility to which Gov. Brown would flee for safety in case of nuclear war or other disaster—such as a major accident at the nearby Rancho Seco nuclear power plant — is nothing like the awesome bunker with situation maps and fancy computer shown in the movie satirizing the nuclear Armageddon.

Instead, it is a collection of rather drab rooms in the basement of a state office building that are the regular working spaces for several dozen state employees.

"It's radiation-proof, but I doubt if it's bomb-proof," state Office of Emergency Services spokesman Michael Browne said of the emergency command center.

The center is located in the basement of a block-square state office building within sight of the Capitol. The governor could reach it in a very short ride from the garage in the basement of the Capitol directly into the basement emergency complex.

If he arrived during normal working hours, he would find his command "bunker" occupied by a variety of state employees, including a contingent of the State Police, under the command of Assistant Chief Tim Hill.

The space designated for the governor's personal office during the emergency is a concrete and cement-block room with exposed pipes, furnished with several drafting tables and desks occupied by the state workers who use the room.

In several nearby rooms there are about a dozen radio sets, Teletype machines and special telephones that would link Brown directly to state and national emergency and defense officials. Some of the state communication systems are used regularly for normal state activities and the others are tested frequently to ensure they are ready if necessary in an emergency situation, Hill explained.

The command complex includes men's and women's shower rooms — currently used by state workers who ride bicycles to work or jog during lunch — an open area that would become a bunkroom filled with cots stored nearby, and its own kitchen, although there are no canned civil defense rations stored in the complex.

Browne said food could be brought in from the cafeteria upstairs, assuming they had enough advance notice.

Browne said the emergency center was established under a federal law, dating back to the 1950s, that requires every state to have some sort of facility for its governor. The federal government pays part of the expense for the shelter.

Pennsylvania Gov. Richard Thornburgh was prepared to use a similar facility in Harrisburg if the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant accident led to a melt-down and major radiation release.

Rancho Seco, a nuclear power plant of similar design, is less than 25 miles from the Capitol here.

While conducting a tour of the emergency center, Hill said the experts have told him it is impervious to nuclear radiation because it is below ground level, windowless, surrounded by thick concrete walls and able to be sealed off from the outside.

Taxidermy

'Dead' art thrives in local labs

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

Taxidermy could be described as a dead art.

But as an art, it's alive and well and thriving at Chaffey College and the San Bernardino County Museum in Redlands.

At Chaffey College, Dr. Henry Childs and Jim des Lauriers, biology professors, are supervising a group of interested students in the taxidermy art during an after-school project.

In the basement of the county museum, Eugene Cardiff, curator of natural history, oversees and directs the stuffing of birds and mammals done by many interested volunteers.

Both groups of taxidermists receive their birds and animals from the general public or game wardens of the California Department of Fish and Game.

Cardiff explained animals are hit by cars or found dead from natural or mysterious causes. The finders will bring the bodies to either Chaffey College or the museum, where they will be placed in freezers.

At Chaffey College, the students interested in taxidermy are planning careers in veterinary medicine, wild life or game management or forestry. Some are just interested in learning the art for their own satisfaction, des Lauriers said.

Those doing taxidermy at the museum are students, men and women retired from related career fields and just interested volunteers.

A large majority of the birds will be stuffed as study skins for students rather than being mounted. Both Chaffey College and the museum have drawers full of rare and common bird skins.

On Tuesday nights, the Chaffey students travel to the museum to work and learn with Cardiff, des Lauriers said. "This gives us the opportunity of working with a variety of specimens and the museum gets our time and energy," he said.

The Chaffey College lab in the life science area has some 1,000 specimens of birds and mammals with 200 in mounts, according to Childs.

"We couldn't teach ornithology (bird life) without a bird collection," des Lauriers said. The taxidermy students are taken on field trips, the professor said, so they can "observe on their own what we've talked about in class."

The professor explained that any animal on the rare or endangered list is under restrictions about it's possession, even when dead. "You have to have permits to have sea otters and eagles," he said.

There are many times when a bird, such as an eagle, will be brought to the college lab. "Someone has gotten it illegally and wants to get rid of it," des Lauriers said. Once the lab is in possession of such a gift, the game warden is notified.

The college group not only deals with the smaller birds and mammals, but with larger game. Childs showed off a drying Asian leopard, which he said, "Was probably a private pet and got loose, then was killed by a car. We were called and wanted to know if we'd like to have it."

Currently, the students are assembling a buffalo skeleton, the largest animal they have tackled.

"The legs are being put together now," Childs said, "but some of it is in the bug box."

The bug box is a large box containing beetles which eat the flesh off the bones. "If the bug box is going well," Childs said, "it only takes a few days to clean the bones. We have the only good bug box in San Bernardino County."

The buffalo will not be stuffed, but the skeleton will be assembled for study. "Skins and skeletons are expensive," des Lauriers said. "A bison skeleton costs about $10,000 and a horse runs $8,000." He explained skins and skeletons are invaluable educational resources which the school could never afford.

In both the college and museum zoology labs, there is evidence of camaraderie between the instructors and the students and volunteers. The students are not getting credits for their work, and the volunteers are unpaid.

"Good students are products of good professors," des Lauriers said, "and these students are here because Hank (Childs) and I are."

Cardiff said he started at the museum in 1956 as a volunteer curator of birds and mammals. He has been on the paid staff since the new museum opened five years ago.

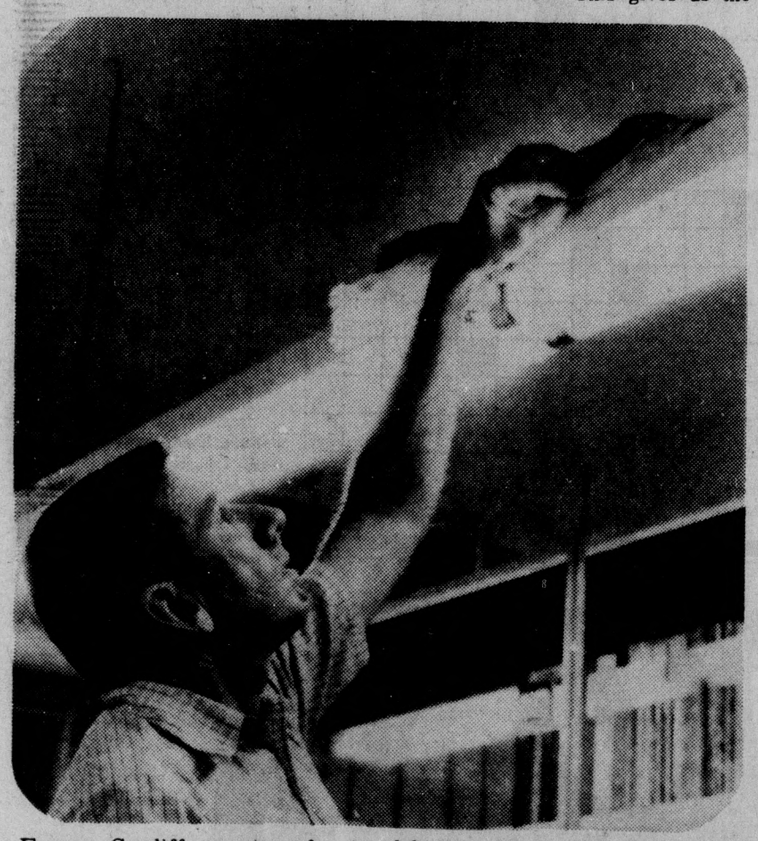

He has some 20 regular volunteers who do the taxidermy works, but as Bob Wilson, a faithful volunteer, said, "We can prepare the bird for mounting, but it takes Gene to do the final touches because he knows just where the wings go and the right positioning of the bodies."

The ornithology library at the San Bernardino County Museum is available to any student. It contains hundreds of volumes and bird displays which are being indexed alphabetically for the convenience of students and docents conducting tours, Cardiff said.

Cardiff has been doing taxidermy work since he was 12 years old, and "I'm still learning and improving my technique." He also teaches a field study of birds each winter and spring for the UCR Extension courses, and in July will take a UCE study group to the outer islands of Alaska. He also has taken groups to Arizona, Texas, Yosemite and Mexico.

Jim des Lauriers, biology professor at Chaffey College, is showing a pelican which was mounted at the college. With Dr. Henry Childs, des Lauriers supervises a group of students in taxidermy art during an after-school, non-credit project. Students are mounting a buffalo skeleton and stuffing birds or preparing them as study skins. (Staff photo by H. Lorren Au Jr.)

Eugene Cardiff, curator of natural history at the San Bernardino County Museum, Redlands, is checking to see if two frozen birds have thawed so they can be made into study skins. He found over the light fixture was an excellent place for thawing small animals. Cardiff directs volunteers and students in taxidermy and ornithology at the museum. The basement laboratory also houses an extensive ornithology library open to students of bird life. (Staff photo by Marge Gross)

Sweat-suited joggers' surprise

Keeping fit the old way outdoors

By Harlon Bartlett
Copley News Service

Historians surely will make note of the fact that exercise was discovered in America in, oh, about 1976.

That's roughly the time when many people found that rapidly moving various parts of their body, either by running or playing tennis, handball or racquetball, made them look better, feel better and think better.

Millions of folks thought they had found the good life 10 years ago. They no longer had to mow the lawn, stoop in the garden, paint the house or walk to the store.

Hey, man, this is livin'. Madison Avenue — sometimes known as Mad Avenue — says so.

About the time the lifestyle makers had everyone settled in and doing nothing, doing it well, too, the realization struck the Lords of Our Mind and Wallet that this wasn't working out so well.

With all those bodies doing their immovable blob routine to perfection, the nation's cash registers were being terribly neglected.

OK, troops, up and at 'em.

Time to get moving. Get in line right over here and we'll sell you everything you need to put that wretched mess of a physique back in shape.

People obediently stormed exercise emporiums and set out on lonesome forays at dawn to resurrect themselves.

Tra-la, exercise is again fashionable — albeit in a form that certainly would confound great - granddad.

This is very laudable and healthful and a more stimulating topic of conversation than the pap served on TV last night.

It's also somewhat laughable to the nation's outdoorspersons.

You see, they've been out in the boonies for 70 or 80 years panting and sweating. Rowing boats, reeling in 25 - pound yellowtail, stomping through the brush after quail, climbing mountains in hopes of meeting a golden trout.

Outdooring has been annointed with the righteousness of, say, jogging, which is said to have religious overtones.

For one thing, outdoor fans dress kind of funny — wrinkled, often soiled clothes, a pocket half torn off, goofy - looking hats, footwear that belongs at a hog calling.

And they've been known to take a nip or two from brown bottles and puff contentedly on a pipe or — can this be said in front of the surgeon general? — cigarettes.

But worst of all, they go about their physical pursuits for entirely the wrong reason: because it's a lot of fun.

That, of course, is sinful. If you're not punishing yourself, you must be up to no good.

Outdoorists never have pretended to be shining examples of physical conditioning. Many, in fact, are not. Exercise is a mere by - product, sometimes a distasteful one, of outdoor sports.

Nevertheless, exercise is an intrinsic part of outdoorsy endeavors.

Some of today's sleek, sweat - suited joggers might be surprised, and roundly embarrassed, to be left on a mountainside in the wake of an old codger in ragamuffin attire, apparently hiding a basketball under his shirt and obviously carrying a heavy deer rifle in his hand.

Still, outdoorspersons don't get uppity or smug about their physical well - being.

Instead, they come dragging home at the end of the day, talking not of muscles toned or calories burned, but of fish caught, doves missed or songbirds added to a list.

RESOLUTION AND NOTICE OF INTENTION TO SOLICIT PROPOSALS FOR THE CONSTRUCTION, MAINTENANCE, AND OPERATION OF RECREATIONAL FACILITIES AT FRANK G. BONELLI REGIONAL COUNTY PARK

WHEREAS, the Board of Supervisors of the County of Los Angeles, State of California, has found that the public interest and welfare will be served by the solicitation of proposals for the construction, maintenance and operation of recreational facilities at Frank G. Bonelli Regional County Park;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the Board of Supervisors of the County of Los Angeles, State of California, as follows:

1. That it is the intention of the County of Los Angeles, Department of County Engineer - Facilities, on the 12th day of June, 1979, prior to 5:00 p.m., in its offices at 550 South Vermont Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90020, to receive proposals for the construction, maintenance and operation of recreational facilities at Frank G. Bonelli Regional County Park. The purpose of this Resolution and Notice of Intention is not to solicit formal bids, but to request proposals to construct, maintain and operate the facilities described above.

2. Selection of the best responsible proposal will be based upon the following criteria:

a. The ability of the proposer to provide and operate recreational facilities that will complement the park;

b. The extent and quality of the development program to be constructed and the services to be provided to the public;

c. The percentage of gross annual income and/or annual minimum amount to be paid to the County as rent;

d. The financial responsibility of the proposer to construct, maintain and operate the facilities;

e. The ability of the proposer to demonstrate intent to obtain and maintain adequate insurance coverage.

3. Proposer must have had two years' experience in the operation or management of related facilities to those being developed. If proposer shall be a corporation or other form of business partnership, he must guarantee that his actual on-site manager will possess these qualifications.

4. Proposer shall keep the concession facility open during such hours as required by the County Engineer, hereinafter known as Director, as he deems shall adequately serve the public wishing to utilize this facility. If conditions affecting the operation of this concession periodically change, the Director and proposer may adjust minimum days and hours of operation by mutual written agreement.

5. The County shall provide the site as shown on Exhibit "A" to the sample lease and concession agreement provided as part of the proposal package.

6. The proposal package will be on file in the offices of the Department of County Engineer - Facilities, Real Property Branch, 550 South Vermont Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90020, and will be made available to any and all prospective proposers prior to the date set by the Board of Supervisors for the submitting of the proposals. Said proposal package contains in more detail the terms and conditions.

7. Proposers must satisfy themselves by personal examination of the site and by such other means as they may prefer as to the conditions and requirements of the proposed ground lease.

8. QUALIFICATIONS OF PROPOSERS

Proposers must present evidence indicative of their ability to finance, construct, maintain and operate the required improvements to the satisfaction of the County. To this end, each proposer shall furnish the following information with his sealed proposal:

Financial Statement - A full and detailed presentation of proposer's assets, liabilities and net worth.

Credit References - A minimum of five (5) credit or financial references giving names, addresses and telephone numbers in each instance.

General Development Program - A narrative description of the improvements to be constructed, together with estimated construction costs.

Cash - Flow Analysis - A cash - flow analysis demonstrating your thinking with regard to the projected ability of the proposed development to provide sufficient revenue to recapture your investment, cover operating expenses, and yield an adequate return. This cash - flow analysis should project your anticipation through the first five operating years.

Proof of Insurance - A letter of commitment from an acceptable insurance company setting forth that adequate insurance coverage ($1 million single limit for liabilities as described in the sample lease and concession agreement of the proposal package) will be available at the time of concession operations. Letters of intent from insurance brokers will not be considered acceptable substitutes.

9. The filing of such statements shall constitute permission by the proposer for the County to check, verify and have certified all information contained in such statements. If the County desires, additional information may be requested from the proposer. Failure to comply with any such request may disqualify any proposer from further consideration.

10. Sealed proposals must be filed in the offices of the Department of County Engineer - Facilities, Real Property Branch, 550 South Vermont Avenue, 10th Floor, Los Angeles, CA 90020. The final acceptance of any proposal as recommended by the Director may be made at any meeting of the County Board of Supervisors within ninety (90) days after receipt by said department of said proposals or such longer period as may be deemed necessary.

11. No oral proposals will be considered by the County Board of Supervisors or the Department of County Engineer - Facilities.

12. The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors reserves the right to reject any and all proposals. In the event the County accepts any proposal, an Option to Acquire a Lease and Concession Agreement shall be awarded to the person who submits the best proposal, in the sole judgment of the County. The County reserves the right to negotiate with one or more proposers.

13. Each proposal must be accompanied by a Cashier's Check or a check certified by a responsible bank in the County of Los Angeles and payable to said County in the amount of $2,500 as a guarantee that proposer will execute the lease and concession agreement if same is awarded to such proposer. This guarantee will be applied toward, but shall not be considered a limitation upon any damage which may be sustained by the County if propower fails to so comply.

Rancho Cucamonga resident

Cal Poly professor appointed as Rhodesian foreign minister

By RITA BUSBY
Staff Writer

A Cal Poly Pomona professor, still in shock at being appointed foreign minister of Rhodesia (Zimbabwe), said Tuesday he had a "million things" going through his head — one of which was where to find gas this morning.

James G. Kamusikiri, of Rancho Cucamonga, associate professor of history and instructor at Cal Poly Pomona for five years, received reports a week ago, through a London newspaper, that he had been appointed foreign minister by Bishop Abel Muzorewa, who heads the new black-majority government in Rhodesia.

Kamusikiri, interrupted by phone calls several times during an interview Tuesday, said he first heard of the appointment when the London Evening Mail called him last week.

He said he has talked with President-elect Muzorewa and has accepted the position, but added, "It still isn't official yet."

Kamusikiri will be third in power in the country of almost seven million people, dominated by a 95 percent black or other ethnic population.

Disdainful of the word "power," Kamusikiri, born in Rhodesia and schooled in the United States, said, "I'm just one of the regulars here."

But he said he didn't think it was unusual for him to be named to the position simply because the United States has been his home for several years.

"Muzorewa has gone out of the country for leaders because we didn't have the facilities to train our people for years in Rhodesia.

"It's a myth to think we're 'outside the country,'" Kamusikiri added, regarding the appointment of Rhodesians living outside their African country to the new cabinet.

Kamusikiri has been involved with the United African National Council, his party affiliation in Rhodesia, while in the United States. He became active in the group after returning to Rhodesia in 1973 to do field research for his doctorate.

It was during that visit that he met Muzorewa, who was mobilizing the black country against the Ian Smith regime, according to Kamusikiri.

"He (Muzorewa) impressed me," the professor said, although he added that he "never conceived of being appointed foreign minister some day."

When Kamusikiri returned to the United States in 1974, he became chairman of the United African National Council on the West Coast.

Active pictures tell the story

By JERRY WINDLE
Copley News Service

We humans are of a curious nature. If we see people in a photograph, we start to wonder why they are there and what they are doing.

It is the photographer's job to make the picture tell the story.

That is why it is a good technique to have people doing something in a picture rather than standing there staring directly into the camera lens.

This technique works equally well with photographing people who are posed or performing an activity, such as sports.

The photographer, places his subject and chooses his camera position so he is looking into the subject as the activity takes place.

Often, however, this may put the photographer in a position which is not the safest. You wouldn't want to position yourself directly in front of a baseball pitcher throwing a ball or a batter hitting a ball.

To do this would require a long telephoto lens so the photographer would be out of danger but still retain the camera position on the subject.

In using this technique, you should be aware of one drawback. The person, naturally, often will be looking down. If the activity is on a table top and your subject looks down, you can say goodbye to the eyes and your subject will seem to be asleep.

There are two solutions to this problem. First have the person look up slightly, say just over the top of what he is doing, or lower the camera position so you are looking up into the person's face.

The latter also has its problems. If you are working with a strong overhead light, the subject's face will go into deep shadow when looking down, so the photographer will have to add some light to the face. Often a white table top will help, since it reflects the light back up into the subject's face.

Here's still another thing to consider.

If you are working in rather dim light, say indoors, you will be concerned with the depth of focus in your picture. You can either focus on the person or on what the person is doing. If you are using a large f-stop such as f-2 or f-2.8, then your depth of field will be extremely shallow and it will be practically impossible to get both in sharp focus.

It will be up to you to decide what you want to emphasize. Why not try some of both? Make one or two pictures focused on the person, and then other shots focused on the activity.

If your subject is seven feet away and the activity is at 5 feet, by using the hyperfocal distance you could focus at six feet and have everything acceptably sharp, even when using a large f-stop.

I don't want to get into a long, confusing discussion of hyperfocal distance, but it is sufficient to explain that it is the area between the closest point of focus and the farthest. This changes with each f-stop, the shorter the depth-of-field or hyperfocal distance. The smaller the f-stop, the greater.

Most basic camera books explain this more fully, and you might want to check them if you are still confused.

It idea is to watch your point of focus so you will be able to select what you want sharply in focus and what you want out-of-focus or blurry. If your camera has a "preview" button, you can get some idea of what is in focus and what isn't by actually stopping down to the f-stop you will be using.

The important thing to remember if you have people in your picture is to give them some reason to be there, some purpose.

Active subjects make a better photograph. To achieve pictures like these the photographer places his subject and chooses his camera position so he is looking into the subject as the activity takes place.

Heat affects camera, film

By CRAIG SWANSON

With summer just around the corner, and hot weather vacation pictures in the offing, here are a few tips on how to keep cameras and film cool in the heat.

The first thing to remember is that if you are hot and approaching the point of exhaustion, your camera and the film inside probably are too. Film is particularly sensitive to heat.

If the camera is being carried, try to keep the sun from shining directly on it. Sling the camera over the shoulder opposite the sun so your body is between the sun and the camera.

Pocket cameras should be slipped into a purse or shirt pocket.

Never leave a camera sitting in the sun. Cover the camera with a beach towel or blanket if you aren't in a shady spot.

If you must leave your camera in an automobile, place the camera in the trunk wrapped in a towel. Don't leave your camera and film in the glove box or on the rear window ledge where the heat can become excessive.

An ice chest is a good place to keep a camera and extra film on hot weather trips. Place the camera and film in a watertight container, even if you are using synthetic ice, to avoid condensation. Even a small ice chest, with no ice, affords some insulation from the heat.

After your vacation, be sure to remove all of your film from the car. The film you didn't use can be stored in the refrigerator and used later.

A little bit of care and planning can go a long way toward insuring that your valuable vacation pictures won't be ruined by mother nature.
